

Today in Math History...

-11 September 1798

Franz Ernst Neumann born.

He formulated the law of electromagnetic induction.

Electromagnetic induction is the production of an electrical voltage across a conductor situated in a changing magnetic flux. Electromagnetic induction underlies the operation of generators, induction motors, transformers, and most other electrical machines.

