

Today in Math History...

-21 November 1811

Gauss to Bessel: “One should never forget that the functions, like all mathematical constructions, are only our own constructions.”

Johann Friedrich Carl Gauss was a German mathematician, generally regarded as one of the greatest mathematicians of all time for his contributions to number theory, geometry, probability theory, geodesy, planetary astronomy, the theory of functions, and potential theory.

